

Luke 1:75

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

In holiness and righteousness before him, all the days of our life.

Analysis

Service to God is characterized by 'holiness and righteousness before him, all the days of our life.' 'Holiness' refers to consecration and separation unto God, while 'righteousness' indicates moral conformity to His character. The phrase 'before him' (Greek 'enopion autou') emphasizes that our service is rendered in God's presence, under His gaze, accountable to His standard. 'All the days of our life' indicates lifelong, continuous obedience—not occasional righteousness but persistent, progressive sanctification. This describes the nature of true Christian living: holy devotion and righteous conduct maintained throughout one's entire life in God's presence. Salvation produces holiness; it doesn't merely provide legal standing.

Historical Context

The emphasis on holiness and righteousness before God reflects Old Testament covenant requirements (Lev 19:2; Deut 6:25) while anticipating New Testament sanctification teaching. Zacharias envisions salvation producing transformed living, not merely forgiven status.
