

Luke 10:16

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

He that heareth you heareth me; and he that despiseth you despiseth me; and he that despiseth me despiseth him that sent me.

Analysis

Jesus tells the seventy: 'He that heareth you heareth me; and he that despiseth you despiseth me; and he that despiseth me despiseth him that sent me.' This establishes apostolic authority—reception or rejection of Jesus' messengers equals reception or rejection of Jesus Himself, and ultimately God the Father. The Greek 'athetōn' (ἀθετῶν, despiseth/rejects) means to set aside, nullify, treat as invalid. Rejecting Christ's ambassadors rejects Christ; rejecting Christ rejects God. This validates gospel messengers' authority while warning those who reject them.

Historical Context

This encouraged the seventy returning from their mission (vv. 17-20). They faced rejection in some places (v. 10-12), which could discourage. Jesus assured them that rejection wasn't personal but rejection of Him and ultimately God. This principle appears throughout Scripture—prophets represented God (Jeremiah 25:4), rejecting them rejected God (1 Samuel 8:7). Apostles carried Christ's authority (2 Corinthians 5:20, 1 Thessalonians 4:8). Early church understood that persecuting Christians persecuted Christ (Acts 9:4-5). Modern application: faithful gospel preaching carries divine authority; rejecting the message rejects Christ regardless of messenger's human weakness.

Study Questions

1. What does Jesus' identification of Himself with His messengers teach about the authority of faithful gospel preaching?
2. How should understanding that rejection of the message equals rejection of Christ affect our evangelistic confidence?
