

Luke 11:35

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Take heed therefore that the light which is in thee be not darkness.

Analysis

Take heed therefore that the light which is in thee be not darkness (Σκόπει οὖν μὴ τὸ φῶς τὸ ἐν σοὶ σκότος ἔστιν)—the imperative skopei (take heed, watch carefully) warns against self-deception. One can possess what they consider 'light' (phōs) while actually dwelling in 'darkness' (skotos). This paradox describes those confident in their spiritual insight yet fundamentally blind—the Pharisees' exact condition. They considered themselves Israel's spiritual guides (Matthew 23:16, 24) while rejecting the Light of the World.

Paul later warns of those 'having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof' (2 Timothy 3:5). Presumed light that is actually darkness represents the most dangerous spiritual state—false assurance preventing repentance. Jesus warns his hearers to examine whether their theological confidence rests on truth or tradition.

Historical Context

First-century Pharisaism prided itself on superior Torah knowledge and scrupulous observance. This 'light' of religious achievement blinded many to their need for grace and failure to recognize Messiah. Jesus's warning challenged the foundation of Pharisaic self-confidence—their religious system itself might be darkness masquerading as light.

Study Questions

1. What religious convictions or practices might you be trusting as 'light' while they actually represent spiritual darkness?
2. How can you distinguish between genuine spiritual illumination and false confidence in your own understanding?
3. What tests might reveal whether the 'light' in you is authentic truth or mere human tradition?
