

Luke 17:16

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And fell down on his face at his feet, giving him thanks: and he was a Samaritan.

Analysis

One returns: 'And fell down on his face at his feet, giving him thanks: and he was a Samaritan.' Only one of the ten returned. He 'fell down on his face at his feet' (ἔπεσεν ἐπὶ πρόσωπον παρὰ τοὺς πόδας αὐτοῦ, epesen epi prosōpon para tous podas autou)—full prostration, the posture of worship. He was 'giving him thanks' (εὐχαριστῶν αὐτῷ, eucharistōn autō), from which we get 'Eucharist.' The shocking detail: 'he was a Samaritan' (αὐτὸς ἦν Σαμαρίτης, autos ēn Samaritēs). Jews and Samaritans were bitter enemies, divided by centuries of ethnic and religious hostility. Yet the only one who returned to thank Jesus was the ethnic and religious outsider. This demonstrates that privilege doesn't guarantee gratitude, and marginalization doesn't prevent it. Faith and thankfulness transcend ethnicity.

Historical Context

Samaritans were descendants of Northern Kingdom Israelites who intermarried with Assyrian colonists after 722 BC. Jews viewed them as ethnic and religious mongrels. Samaritans worshiped on Mount Gerizim rather than Jerusalem and accepted only the Pentateuch. Jews avoided Samaritans (John 4:9). That nine Jews received healing but didn't return while one Samaritan did exposes the danger of religious privilege—those who feel entitled to God's blessing often take it for granted. Outsiders who receive unexpected grace tend to respond with overwhelming gratitude. This prefigures the Gentiles' enthusiastic reception of the gospel while many Jews rejected it. Election and privilege can breed presumption rather than thankfulness.

Study Questions

1. Why did the marginalized Samaritan demonstrate greater gratitude than the privileged Jews?
2. How does religious privilege or familiarity sometimes decrease rather than increase thankfulness?
3. What does this teach about the relationship between grace received unexpectedly and gratitude expressed wholeheartedly?
