

Luke 18:4

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And he would not for a while: but afterward he said within himself, Though I fear not God, nor regard man;

Analysis

And he would not for a while: but afterward he said within himself, Though I fear not God, nor regard man—the unjust judge's internal monologue reveals his godless character. The Greek phrase ouk ephoboumēn ton theon (οὐκ ἐφοβούμην τὸν θεόν) means 'I do not fear God,' showing complete lack of divine accountability. Similarly, anthrōpon ou entrepomaiō (ἄνθρωπον οὐ ἐντρέπομαι) means 'I have no regard for man'—no human opinion matters to him.

This judge represents the opposite of God's character. Jesus argues a minore ad majus (from lesser to greater): if even this corrupt magistrate eventually yields to persistence, how much more will a loving Father respond to His children's prayers? The parable teaches that persistent prayer overcomes even the worst obstacles.

Historical Context

Roman-occupied Judea had both Jewish courts (religious matters) and Roman courts (civil/criminal cases). Local magistrates often operated with little oversight, creating opportunities for corruption. Widows had no legal advocates and were frequently exploited (Isaiah 1:23). Jesus's audience would immediately recognize this judge as representing the worst kind of judicial corruption—someone with absolute power and zero accountability to either divine or human authority.
