

Luke 19:38

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Saying, Blessed be the King that cometh in the name of the Lord: peace in heaven, and glory in the highest.

Analysis

The crowd's proclamation: 'Saying, Blessed be the King that cometh in the name of the Lord: peace in heaven, and glory in the highest.' This cry quotes and adapts Psalm 118:26, a messianic Psalm sung at Passover. The addition 'the King' (ὁ βασιλεὺς, ho basileus) makes the messianic claim explicit. The phrase 'peace in heaven' (ἐν οὐρανῷ εἰρήνη, en ouranō eirēnē) echoes the angels' birth announcement (Luke 2:14) but shifts the location from earth to heaven—Jesus' kingship establishes peace in the heavenly realm through His coming victory over Satan. 'Glory in the highest' (δόξα ἐν ὑψίστοις, doxa en hypsistois) ascribes supreme praise to God. This moment represents Israel's closest approach to recognizing Jesus as Messiah, though their understanding remained flawed—they expected political liberation, not sacrificial death.

Historical Context

Palm Sunday occurred during Passover week when Jerusalem swelled with pilgrims remembering deliverance from Egypt. Messianic fervor ran high during festivals. The crowd's enthusiasm was genuine but misdirected—they wanted a warrior-king to overthrow Rome, not a suffering servant to die for sins. Within days, many of these same voices would shout 'Crucify Him!' (Luke 23:21). Their fickle allegiance demonstrates the danger of superficial faith based on expectations of earthly benefits. Jesus wept over Jerusalem (v. 41) because He knew they were rejecting their only hope of true peace. Political hopes blinded them to spiritual realities. The tragedy of misunderstood grace haunts this entire narrative.

Study Questions

1. How did the crowd's messianic expectations differ from Jesus' actual mission?
2. What causes the shift from 'Hosanna' on Palm Sunday to 'Crucify' on Good Friday?
3. How might contemporary Christians similarly misunderstand Jesus' kingdom and purposes?
