

Luke 2:50

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And they understood not the saying which he spake unto them.

Analysis

The statement 'they understood not the saying which he spake unto them' reveals that even those closest to Jesus, including His mother who received angelic revelation, didn't fully comprehend His identity and mission. Their lack of understanding wasn't sinful but demonstrates the mystery of the incarnation—God's purposes aren't always immediately clear even to the faithful. Jesus's reference to 'my Father's business' used terminology they heard but didn't fully grasp. This teaches that progressive revelation and understanding characterize spiritual growth; initial confusion doesn't indicate lack of faith. Even Mary needed time to process and understand God's purposes, as shown by her pondering (v19, v51).

Historical Context

Despite Gabriel's announcement and supernatural surrounding Jesus's birth, Joseph and Mary didn't immediately understand all implications of His deity and mission. The mystery of God becoming man meant even those closest to Jesus grew gradually in understanding. This honest admission of their confusion demonstrates Scripture's historical reliability.

Study Questions

1. How does acknowledging confusion about God's ways demonstrate humility rather than unbelief?
2. What does progressive understanding of God's purposes teach about spiritual growth?
3. Why didn't earlier supernatural revelations produce immediate comprehensive understanding?
