

Luke 2:52

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And Jesus increased in wisdom and stature, and in favour with God and man.

Analysis

This summary of Jesus' childhood emphasizes His full humanity and normal development in four dimensions: intellectual (wisdom), physical (stature), spiritual (favor with God), and social (favor with man). The Greek word 'prokoptō' (increased) suggests steady progress and advancement, demonstrating that even in His sinless humanity, Christ experienced genuine human growth and learning. This verse bridges the gap between Jesus' childhood temple visit and His adult ministry, affirming His perfect preparation for His messianic mission while honoring His parents in submission.

Historical Context

Luke uniquely records details of Jesus' childhood, likely received from Mary herself (Luke 2:19, 51). This period of approximately 18 years receives only this one verse of coverage, emphasizing the normalcy of Jesus' upbringing in Nazareth while preparing for His ministry that would begin around age 30.
