

Luke 22:34

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And he said, I tell thee, Peter, the cock shall not crow this day, before that thou shalt thrice deny that thou knowest me.

Analysis

Peter, the cock shall not crow this day, before that thou shalt thrice deny that thou knowest me—Jesus's specific prediction (τρὶς ἀπαρνήσῃ, tris aparnese—three times you will deny) demonstrates divine omniscience and sets up Peter's restoration. The threefold denial would require threefold confession (John 21:15-17) for full healing. Deny (ἀπαρνέομαι, aparneomai) means to disown, renounce completely—the same word used for disciples who must "deny themselves" to follow Christ (Luke 9:23).

Jesus's foreknowledge wasn't merely prediction but pastoral preparation. He warned Peter so that when the rooster crowed, the disciple would remember Christ's words and repent rather than despair like Judas. The failure was certain, but not final. This reveals God's sovereign use of even our sins to humble and refine us when we belong to Christ through genuine, though faltering, faith.

Historical Context

Roosters typically crowed at predictable times during the night (Mark 13:35 mentions the "cockcrowing" as a watch period). Peter's denial occurred in the high priest's courtyard during Jesus's trial, with multiple accusers recognizing Peter's Galilean accent. The public nature of the denial before servants and guards made Peter's shame more acute, yet Jesus later restored him publicly at the lakeside breakfast.
