

Luke 22:51

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And Jesus answered and said, Suffer ye thus far. And he touched his ear, and healed him.

Analysis

And Jesus answered and said, Suffer ye thus far. And he touched his ear, and healed him. Jesus' final miracle before the cross is healing an enemy—the only Gospel miracle performed for someone opposing Him. Εατε heōs toutou (ἐᾶτε ἐώς τούτου, 'permit until this') can mean 'stop, no more of this' (forbidding further violence) or 'permit this [arrest] to proceed.' Both meanings apply: Jesus forbids resistance and submits to His captors. The phrase hapsamenos tou ὅτιου iasato auton (ἀψάμενος τοῦ ὥτιου iáσατο αὐτόν, 'touching the ear, he healed him') shows Jesus exercising divine power even as He surrenders to arrest.

This miracle demonstrates Christ's character: He heals while being betrayed, shows mercy to enemies, and undoes His disciples' damage. It fulfills His teaching to 'love your enemies' (Luke 6:27-28) and 'bless them that curse you.' The irony is profound—Jesus is arrested for claiming to be God, and immediately proves His deity by miraculous healing. Yet the arrest continues, showing how sin blinds: Malchus experiences Christ's power but still assists His enemies.

Historical Context

This healing is unique to Luke's Gospel, written by a physician (Colossians 4:14) who would naturally note medical details. That no Gospel suggests Malchus converted demonstrates the hardness possible even after experiencing miracles. The healing had practical benefit—had Jesus allowed the injury to stand, Peter could have faced assault charges before Roman authorities. Christ's healing thus protected His disciple even while rebuking him. This was likely Jesus' last public miracle before the resurrection.
