

Luke 24:36

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And as they thus spake, Jesus himself stood in the midst of them, and saith unto them, Peace be unto you.

Analysis

Jesus appears: 'And as they thus spake, Jesus himself stood in the midst of them, and saith unto them, Peace be unto you.' While disciples discussed resurrection appearances, 'Jesus himself stood in the midst of them' (αὐτὸς ὁ Ἰησοῦς ἔστι ἐν μέσῳ αὐτῶν, autos ho Iēsous estē en mesō autōn). His sudden appearance ('stood') suggests supernatural entry (John 20:19 notes doors were locked). His greeting: 'Peace be unto you' (Εἰρήνη ὑμῖν, Eirēnē hymin), the standard Jewish greeting but now loaded with meaning. Jesus brings peace through resurrection—peace with God (Romans 5:1), peace of God (Philippians 4:7), and peace between peoples (Ephesians 2:14). Resurrection accomplishes what crucifixion purchased: reconciliation and peace.

Historical Context

Jesus' sudden appearance in the locked room demonstrates His resurrection body's unique properties—physical enough to eat (v. 42-43) yet able to pass through walls. This previews believers' future resurrection bodies—physical but transformed, recognizable yet glorified (1 Corinthians 15:35-49, Philippians 3:20-21). His greeting 'Peace be unto you' fulfills His promise: 'Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you' (John 14:27). Resurrection establishes peace on multiple levels:

1. legal—justified before God
2. relational—reconciled to God
3. personal—internal peace despite circumstances

4. cosmic—all things will be reconciled (Colossians 1:20).

The risen Christ brings comprehensive shalom.
