

Luke 4:7

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

If thou therefore wilt worship me, all shall be thine.

Analysis

If thou therefore wilt worship me, all shall be thine. Satan's second temptation distills to its essence: proskyneō moi (προσκυνέω μοι, worship me). The verb proskyneō (προσκυνέω) means to bow down in reverence, pay homage, or worship—the exclusive prerogative of deity alone. Satan demands what belongs only to God, revealing his fundamental rebellion: the desire to usurp divine worship (Isaiah 14:13-14). The condition 'if thou therefore wilt' (ean oun sy proskynesēs, ἐὰν οὖν σὺ προσκυνήσῃς) makes the offer conditional on a single act of worship.

This temptation presents a Satanic shortcut to messianic dominion without the cross. All shall be thine (estai sou pasa, ἔσται σοῦ πᾶσα) promises immediate universal authority—what Psalm 2:8 and Daniel 7:13-14 already guarantee Christ will receive through suffering and resurrection. The essence of every false religion appears here: worshiping created things rather than the Creator (Romans 1:25). Satan offers Jesus His rightful inheritance through compromise, bypassing the Father's redemptive plan requiring substitutionary atonement.

Historical Context

First-century Jewish messianic expectations centered on political liberation from Rome and establishment of a Davidic kingdom. The Zealot movement advocated armed rebellion against Roman occupation. Satan's offer of immediate kingdoms without the 'scandal' of a crucified Messiah (1 Corinthians 1:23) would have seemed pragmatically attractive from a worldly perspective. Yet Jesus understood

His mission required the cross—only through His death could redemption be accomplished and true dominion over sin, death, and Satan be secured. This temptation would recur when crowds sought to make Jesus king by force (John 6:15) and when Peter rebuked Jesus for predicting His death (Matthew 16:22-23).

Study Questions

1. How does Satan's demand for worship reveal the ultimate goal behind all his temptations and schemes?
2. In what ways are Christians tempted to pursue godly ends (influence, prosperity, success) through ungodly means (compromise, shortcuts, worldly methods)?
3. Why was it necessary for Christ to obtain His kingdom through the cross rather than accepting Satan's offer of immediate dominion?
