

Luke 5:1

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And it came to pass, that, as the people pressed upon him to hear the word of God, he stood by the lake of Gennesaret,

Analysis

As the people pressed upon him to hear the word of God—The verb epikeisthai (ἐπίκεισθαι, 'pressed upon') conveys physical crowding, eager intensity to hear ton logon tou theou (τὸν λόγον τοῦ θεοῦ, 'the word of God'). Luke consistently uses this elevated phrase rather than 'Jesus's teaching,' emphasizing divine authority. The crowd's hunger for God's word contrasts with religious leaders' hardness, validating Jesus's ministry among common people.

He stood by the lake of Gennesaret—Luke uses the Greek name limnēs Gennēsaret (λίμνης Γεννησαρέτ, 'Lake of Gennesaret'), referencing the fertile plain on the northwest shore, rather than the Hebrew 'Sea of Galilee' or 'Sea of Tiberias.' This sets the scene for the miraculous catch of fish (verses 4-11) and Peter's call to discipleship. The geographic specificity anchors Luke's narrative in eyewitness testimony. Standing by water while teaching anticipates using Simon's boat as a floating pulpit (verse 3), demonstrating Jesus's practical adaptability in ministry—turning a fisherman's boat into a teaching platform, ordinary moments into divine encounters.

Historical Context

The Lake of Gennesaret (Sea of Galilee) was central to Galilean life, supporting a thriving fishing industry. The fertile Gennesaret plain produced abundant crops, making the region densely populated. Jesus concentrated His early ministry here rather than in Jerusalem, reaching common people—fishermen, farmers, tax collectors—who became His first disciples. The lake's acoustics made it ideal for outdoor teaching to large crowds.

Study Questions

1. What does the crowd's eagerness to 'hear the word of God' reveal about spiritual hunger? How does your own hunger for Scripture compare?
2. How does Jesus's use of a fisherman's boat for ministry illustrate His ability to sanctify ordinary resources for kingdom purposes?
3. In what practical, unexpected ways might God be calling you to use your 'boat'—your resources, skills, or platform—for His word?
