

Luke 8:17

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

For nothing is secret, that shall not be made manifest; neither any thing hid, that shall not be known and come abroad.

Analysis

For nothing is secret, that shall not be made manifest; neither any thing hid, that shall not be known and come abroad. Jesus grounds the lamp teaching in an eschatological principle: ultimate revelation of all things. The parallel construction emphasizes totality—nothing secret (oudēn krypton, οὐδὲν κρυπτόν) and nothing hid (apokryphon, ἀπόκρυφον) both speak to currently concealed realities. Both will be made manifest (phaneron genētai, φανερὸν γένηται) and known and come abroad (gnōsthē kai eis phaneron elthē, γνωσθῆ καὶ εἰς φανερὸν ἔλθῃ)—comprehensive public exposure.

This has dual application:

1. God's truth, currently hidden from many (v. 10), will ultimately be revealed universally
2. Human secrets—thoughts, motives, deeds—will be exposed at judgment (Romans 2:16, 1 Corinthians 4:5, 2 Corinthians 5:10).

The principle encourages disciples: though the gospel seems hidden now, God will vindicate it. It also warns: secret sins will be revealed, so live transparently before God. The connection to verse 16 is clear—the lamp (gospel truth) cannot ultimately be hidden; God will ensure its full revelation.

Historical Context

Jesus spoke in an honor-shame culture where reputation and public appearance mattered supremely. Many religious leaders maintained outward piety while harboring private hypocrisy (Luke 11:39-44, 12:1-3)—a practice Jesus condemned relentlessly. The Pharisees' secret plots against Jesus would eventually be exposed. The disciples' private instruction about the kingdom would later be proclaimed publicly (Acts 1-28). In Luke 12:2-3, Jesus makes the same point explicitly: 'For there is nothing covered, that shall not be revealed; neither hid, that shall not be known. Therefore whatsoever ye have spoken in darkness shall be heard in the light.' For early Christians facing persecution, this promised ultimate vindication—truth would triumph, and their enemies' wickedness would be exposed. For hypocrites, it warned of certain judgment when God reveals all secrets.

Study Questions

1. How does the certainty that 'nothing is secret, that shall not be made manifest' affect the way you live privately?
2. What comfort does this verse offer to believers whose faithfulness is currently unrecognized or whose enemies seem to prosper?
3. How should awareness of ultimate revelation shape our evangelistic urgency—knowing that God will fully reveal His truth?
