

Luke 9:3

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And he said unto them, Take nothing for your journey, neither staves, nor scrip, neither bread, neither money; neither have two coats apiece.

Analysis

Take nothing for your journey (μηδὲν ἄρτετε)—Jesus commands radical dependence on God's provision. The prohibition is comprehensive: neither staves, nor scrip, neither bread, neither money; neither have two coats. The Greek construction with repeated mēde (nor) emphasizes absolute trust in divine provision rather than human preparation.

This mission training deliberately stripped the Twelve of self-sufficiency. Unlike Matthew 10:10 which allows a staff, Luke's account (like Mark 6:8) is stricter—no staff, no traveler's bag (pēra), no provisions, no money, not even a spare tunic. The message: God's servants must trust His provision through those who receive His Word. This anticipates Luke 22:35-36, where Jesus later permits provisions, showing the temporary nature of this training exercise in radical faith.

Historical Context

In first-century Palestine, travelers typically carried a staff for protection, a leather bag for provisions, bread, money (copper coins), and an extra tunic. Jewish custom permitted travelers to carry these essentials. Jesus's prohibition would have seemed shocking—sending His disciples out deliberately vulnerable and dependent on hospitality.

Study Questions

1. What 'provisions' do you rely on instead of trusting God's moment-by-moment provision?
2. How does Jesus's later permission to carry provisions (Luke 22:35-36) inform our understanding of faith versus presumption?
