

Mark 1:28

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And immediately his fame spread abroad throughout all the region round about Galilee.

Analysis

---

Mark's characteristic 'immediately' (Greek: euthys) appears forty-one times in his Gospel, emphasizing the rapid spread of Christ's fame following His authoritative teaching and exorcism. This demonstrates the sovereignty of God in drawing people to witness Christ's ministry, fulfilling the divine timetable for revelation. The geographical spread throughout Galilee prepared hearts for the gospel message.

Historical Context

Galilee in 30 AD was densely populated with numerous villages within walking distance. News traveled quickly through social networks in this agrarian society. Mark, likely writing to Roman Christians around 65 AD, emphasizes action and immediacy throughout his fast-paced Gospel account.

Study Questions

1. How does the rapid spread of Christ's fame demonstrate God's sovereign orchestration of His redemptive plan?
2. In what ways can our lives create a 'fame' for Christ that draws others to investigate His claims?
