

Mark 1:41

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And Jesus, moved with compassion, put forth his hand, and touched him, and saith unto him, I will; be thou clean.

Analysis

Christ's compassion (Greek: splagchnizomai, moved in the inward parts) demonstrates God's heart toward the afflicted. His physical touch was revolutionary—others fled from lepers, but Jesus touched the untouchable, showing that His holiness cleanses rather than being defiled by contact with uncleanness. The immediate healing displays divine power, while the touch displays divine love—both necessary for true redemption.

Historical Context

Touching a leper made one ceremonially unclean for seven days, requiring ritual purification. Jesus' willingness to touch violated purity laws, yet demonstrated His authority over the Levitical system. His touch would have been the first human contact this leper experienced in perhaps years or decades.

Study Questions

1. How does Christ's touch of the leper challenge our fear of being 'contaminated' by close contact with sinners?
2. What does the combination of compassion and power in this healing reveal about the character of God?
