

Mark 12:32

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And the scribe said unto him, Well, Master, thou hast said the truth: for there is one God; and there is none other but he:

Analysis

The scribe's response—Well, Master, thou hast said the truth—affirms Jesus' authority as a teacher (διδάσκαλε, didaskale = 'teacher' or 'master'). His declaration there is one God; and there is none other but he echoes the Shema's radical monotheism from Deuteronomy 6:4. In a polytheistic Greco-Roman world where Caesar claimed divinity and provincial cults proliferated, this confession was countercultural and politically dangerous.

The scribe's emphatic statement—οὐκ ἔστιν ἄλλος πλὴν αὐτοῦ (ouk estin allos plēn autou, 'there is no other except him')—uses double negation for rhetorical force. This isn't mere theological abstraction but existential commitment: Israel's God alone deserves absolute allegiance. The scribe demonstrates genuine understanding by connecting Jesus' teaching to Scripture's foundational truth. His affirmation prepares for his profound insight in verse 33—that love surpasses ritual sacrifice.

Historical Context

The Shema (Deuteronomy 6:4, 'Hear, O Israel: the LORD our God is one LORD') was Judaism's most foundational confession, recited twice daily by devout Jews. It established ethical monotheism—worship of the one true God—as Israel's distinctive identity among pagan nations. In the first-century Roman Empire, Jews and Christians faced pressure to participate in emperor worship and civic religion. Confessing 'one God' excluded all rivals, including Caesar. This conversation occurred in Jerusalem's temple, where sacrificial worship continued daily—yet this scribe will soon recognize that love transcends even temple ritual (v. 33), anticipating Christianity's break from sacrificial system after Jesus' once-for-all atonement.

Study Questions

1. How does the scribe's public affirmation of monotheism in polytheistic Jerusalem model courage to confess unpopular truth?
2. What modern 'gods' (money, career, nation, ideology) compete for the allegiance that belongs to God alone?
3. Why is theological orthodoxy (right belief about God's oneness) inseparable from practical worship (exclusive devotion)?
