

Mark 13:29

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

So ye in like manner, when ye shall see these things come to pass, know that it is nigh, even at the doors.

Analysis

When ye shall see these things come to pass, know that it is nigh, even at the doors—The Greek ginōskete (γινώσκετε, know/recognize) shifts from passive observation to certain knowledge. Tauta (ταῦτα, 'these things') refers back to the specific signs enumerated in verses 5-23: false messiahs, wars, earthquakes, persecution, the abomination of desolation, and great tribulation. The phrase eggys estin epi thyrais (ἐγγύς ἐστιν ἐπὶ θύραις, 'near is at doors') uses spatial metaphor for temporal imminence.

The subject of 'it is nigh' is ambiguous in Greek—could be masculine ('he,' the Son of Man) or neuter ('it,' the kingdom/end). This ambiguity may be intentional: Christ's coming and the kingdom's consummation are inseparable. The image of standing at the doors echoes James 5:9, where the Judge stands before the doors. For Mark's audience, these signs were materializing in the Roman-Jewish war (AD 66-70), yet Jesus's words extend beyond that immediate crisis to final fulfillment.

Historical Context

By AD 65-70, Jewish revolt against Rome was escalating. False messiahs like Theudas (Acts 5:36) and Simon bar Giora had appeared. Claudius expelled Jews from Rome (AD 49); Nero's persecution began (AD 64). Earthquakes struck Laodicea (AD 60) and Pompeii (AD 62). Mark's readers could 'see these things' unfolding, signaling judgment's nearness—the temple's destruction would come within a generation (v. 30).
