

Mark 16:2

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And very early in the morning the first day of the week, they came unto the sepulchre at the rising of the sun.

Analysis

Very early in the morning the first day of the week (λίαν πρωὶ τῇ μιᾷ τῶν σαββάτων, lian prōi tē mia tōn sabbatōn)—literally "very early on the first of the Sabbaths," marking Sunday as the new Christian worship day. At the rising of the sun (ἀνατείλαντος τοῦ ἡλίου) carries symbolic weight: as the sun rose physically, the "Sun of Righteousness" (Malachi 4:2) had already risen from death's darkness.

Mark emphasizes their urgency—despite danger from Roman guards and Jewish authorities, love compelled them at dawn's earliest light. This contrasts sharply with the male disciples hiding in fear (14:50). The women's courage makes their subsequent terror at the angel (v.8) all the more striking—resurrection glory exceeds even death's horror.

Historical Context

Roman guards watched tombs until the third day (when Jews believed the soul finally departed). The women risked arrest approaching a sealed, guarded tomb. Early Christians soon worshiped on "the Lord's Day" (Revelation 1:10) instead of the Jewish Sabbath, commemorating this resurrection morning.
