

Mark 16:7

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

But go your way, tell his disciples and Peter that he goeth before you into Galilee: there shall ye see him, as he said unto you.

Analysis

Tell his disciples and Peter (τοῖς μαθηταῖς αὐτοῦ καὶ τῷ Πέτρῳ, tois mathētais autou kai tō Petrō)—the specific mention of Peter is stunning. The disciple who denied Jesus three times (14:66-72) receives personal assurance of restoration. This gracious singling-out reveals Christ's shepherd heart seeking His scattered sheep. He goeth before you into Galilee fulfills Jesus' prediction (14:28) and returns them to where their calling began (1:16-20).

As he said unto you (καθὼς εἶπεν ὑμῖν)—the resurrection vindicated all Jesus' words, including those they failed to understand or believe. Galilee, not Jerusalem, would be the renewed commissioning ground—away from hostile religious authorities, back to the fields of their original discipleship. The Risen Lord meets us where we started, to send us forward transformed.

Historical Context

Peter's denial left him devastated (14:72, "he wept"). This personal word, preserved in Mark's gospel (likely from Peter's own preaching), shows apostolic leadership wasn't merit-based but grace-based. The appearance in Galilee (Matthew 28:16, John 21) restored Peter and commissioned the disciples. Early church tradition says Mark wrote Peter's memoirs.

Study Questions

1. How does Jesus' specific mention of Peter speak to your own failures and need for restoration?
2. Why did Jesus direct disciples back to Galilee rather than staying in Jerusalem?
3. What promises has Christ made to you that circumstances have caused you to doubt or forget?
