

Mark 2:15

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And it came to pass, that, as Jesus sat at meat in his house, many publicans and sinners sat also together with Jesus and his disciples: for there were many, and they followed him.

Analysis

This verse depicts Jesus' fellowship with 'publicans and sinners'—a scandalous association that violated religious propriety. 'Many publicans and sinners sat together with Jesus and his disciples' emphasizes shared table fellowship (συνανέκειντο, synanekeinto), indicating intimate social communion. In Jewish culture, shared meals signified acceptance and friendship; to eat with someone was to endorse them. Jesus' willing association with moral and social outcasts demonstrates His mission to 'seek and save the lost' (Luke 19:10). The phrase 'for there were many, and they followed him' indicates that outcasts comprised a significant portion of Jesus' followers. Reformed theology emphasizes that Christ came to call sinners, not the righteous—His mission is redemptive, not restrictive.

Historical Context

Tax collectors (publicans) were despised as traitors collaborating with Rome's occupation and extorting fellow Jews. They collected tolls, customs, and taxes, often demanding bribes and excess payments. Jewish religious law considered them ceremonially unclean. 'Sinners' (ἁμαρτωλοί) likely refers to those notorious for immoral lifestyles—prostitutes, adulterers, Gentiles, and those in 'unclean' occupations. Pharisaic Judaism emphasized separation from such individuals. Jesus' table fellowship was revolutionary and offensive, challenging purity-based social boundaries.
