

Mark 3:19

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And Judas Iscariot, which also betrayed him: and they went into an house.

Analysis

The list concludes: 'Judas Iscariot, which also betrayed him.' This ominous note reminds that evil infiltrated Jesus' inner circle from beginning. 'Iscariot' likely means 'man of Kerioth' or possibly 'sicarius' (dagger-man). The phrase 'which also betrayed him' uses παραδίδωμι, meaning 'handed over'—same verb describing Jesus 'delivered up' to death (Romans 4:25; 8:32). Judas' betrayal demonstrates proximity to Jesus doesn't guarantee salvation—external association differs from heart transformation.

Historical Context

Judas served as treasurer (John 12:6; 13:29), suggesting trustworthiness. His betrayal for thirty pieces of silver (Matthew 26:14-16) fulfilled prophecy (Zechariah 11:12-13). His suicide (Matthew 27:3-5; Acts 1:18-19) demonstrated despair without repentance. Why did Jesus choose Judas knowing he would betray? To fulfill Scripture and demonstrate sovereign control. Judas' presence warns against presuming salvation based on religious association. His apostasy demonstrates hardness despite evidence.
