

Mark 3:2

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And they watched him, whether he would heal him on the sabbath day; that they might accuse him.

Analysis

The religious leaders 'watched him'—imperfect tense indicating continuous, intense observation suggesting hostile scrutiny. They monitored Jesus to see 'whether he would heal him on the sabbath day; that they might accuse him.' Their purpose was accusation—formal legal charge, revealing hearts opposed to Jesus despite witnessing His power. They prioritized tradition over mercy. Their question wasn't whether Jesus could heal but whether He would violate Sabbath regulations. Reformed theology warns that unconverted religious people can be gospel's fiercest opponents.

Historical Context

Pharisaic Sabbath tradition permitted healing only if life was immediately threatened. Non-emergency healing could wait. Since the withered hand wasn't life-threatening, they expected Jesus to postpone healing. This trap-setting demonstrates spiritual blindness—witnessing divine power yet seeking to destroy its source. This pattern escalates throughout Mark, culminating in crucifixion.
