

Mark 6:49

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

But when they saw him walking upon the sea, they supposed it had been a spirit, and cried out:

Analysis

But when they saw him walking upon the sea, they supposed it had been a spirit, and cried out: Seeing Jesus walking on water, they 'supposed it had been a spirit' (φάντασμα, phantasma, ghost/apparition) and 'cried out' in terror. Their fear despite witnessing countless miracles reveals persistent spiritual dullness. They didn't immediately recognize Jesus in unexpected manifestation, illustrating how preconceptions limit recognizing Christ's presence.

Historical Context

Ancient Mediterranean culture believed in ghosts and sea spirits. Jewish tradition included stories of supernatural beings, though orthodox theology rejected pagan superstitions. Their terror reflected natural human response to apparently supernatural phenomenon. The cry suggests collective panic—all disciples feared simultaneously, showing it wasn't individual hallucination but observable event.
