

Mark 7:31

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And again, departing from the coasts of Tyre and Sidon, he came unto the sea of Galilee, through the midst of the coasts of Decapolis.

Analysis

Departing from Tyre and Sidon, through the Decapolis—Jesus's geographical movements are theologically significant. This circuitous route—through Sidon, then the Decapolis (ten cities), a Gentile region—indicates intentional ministry among Gentiles. The Decapolis was where Jesus healed the Gerasene demoniac who proclaimed what Jesus did (Mark 5:20). Now Jesus returns. Faithful witness prepared soil for fruitful ministry. Jesus's Gentile ministry prefigures the Great Commission—though His earthly mission targeted Israel primarily, He repeatedly ministered to Gentiles, foreshadowing the gospel to all nations (Ephesians 2:14).

Historical Context

The Decapolis was a league of ten Greco-Roman cities (63 BC), predominantly Gentile Hellenistic culture centers. That Jesus traveled extensively through Gentile territory demonstrates His mission's universal scope. The religious establishment criticized Him for associating with sinners; ministry among pagans was more scandalous. Yet Jesus came to seek and save the lost (Luke 19:10), transcending ethnic and religious boundaries.
