

Mark 8:10

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And straightway he entered into a ship with his disciples, and came into the parts of Dalmanutha.

Analysis

Straightway he entered into a ship (εὐθὺς, euthys)—Mark's characteristic 'immediately' emphasizes rapid transition from public ministry to private instruction. Jesus withdraws from Gentile territory after the feeding, crossing back to Jewish regions. Came into the parts of Dalmanutha—location unknown, possibly near Magdala on Galilee's western shore (Matthew 15:39 mentions 'Magdala'). The geographic detail emphasizes historical precision.

This movement from Gentile Decapolis to Jewish territory sets up the following confrontation with Pharisees (v. 11). Jesus' ministry alternates between Jewish and Gentile regions, demonstrating that the kingdom transcends ethnic boundaries. The boat journey recalls Israel's crossing from wilderness to Promised Land—Jesus leads a new exodus not confined to ethnic Israel but encompassing all who believe.

Historical Context

Dalmanutha's precise location remains debated—possibly modern Khirbet el-Minyeh or Ain el-Barideh near Magdala. The Sea of Galilee was roughly seven miles wide; boat crossings took 2-4 hours depending on wind. These frequent crossings exposed disciples to Jesus' sovereignty over nature (calming storms) and demonstrated His intentional border-crossing ministry. First-century Jews strictly avoided Gentile territory to maintain ritual purity; Jesus' repeated crossings challenged these boundaries.
