

Mark 8:35

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

For whosoever will save his life shall lose it; but whosoever shall lose his life for my sake and the gospel's, the same shall save it.

Analysis

Whosoever will save life shall lose it but whosoever shall lose life for my sake gospel shall save it. Paradoxical saying. Save sōsai preserve protect. Life psychēn soul life existence. Shall lose apolesei destroy forfeit eternally. But adversative. Lose apolesei give up sacrifice. For my sake heneken emou because of Christ. And gospel euangelia. Shall save sōsei preserve eternally. Self-preservation leads to loss. Self-sacrifice leads to life. Kingdom values reverse worldly values. Reformed theology emphasizes dying to self losing life in Christ gaining eternal life.

Historical Context

Context is cost of discipleship taking up cross following Jesus. Martyrdom literal possibility for early Christians. But principle broader applies to all who would follow Christ. Must be willing to lose everything for Christ. Rich young ruler could not (Mark 10). Peter declared we left all (10:28). Paul counted all loss for Christ (Phil 3:8). Early church many martyrs willing to lose life for gospel. Modern comfortable Christianity struggles with this radical demand. True discipleship requires total commitment.
