

Matthew 13:17

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

For verily I say unto you, That many prophets and righteous men have desired to see those things which ye see, and have not seen them; and to hear those things which ye hear, and have not heard them.

Analysis

Many prophets and righteous men have desired to see those things which ye see (ἐπεθύμησαν ἵδεῖν ἢ βλέπετε)—epithumeō expresses intense longing, earnest desire. The Old Testament saints yearned to witness the Messiah's coming (1 Peter 1:10-12; Hebrews 11:13), but died in faith without seeing fulfillment. The disciples, however, see the incarnate Word, hear His parables, witness miracles—experiencing what patriarchs and prophets only glimpsed in shadows and types.

This beatitude (unique to Matthew) heightens the privilege and responsibility of those who receive Jesus's teaching. To whom much revelation is given, much understanding is required (Luke 12:48). The disciples' 'seeing' and 'hearing' isn't merely physical but spiritual perception—the blessing of illuminated understanding that parables both reveal and conceal (13:10-16).

Historical Context

Written around AD 60-70, Matthew's Gospel addresses Jewish Christians who needed to see Jesus as the fulfillment of Old Testament prophecy. The 'prophets and righteous men' includes figures like Abraham (John 8:56), Moses (Hebrews 11:26), David (Acts 2:30-31), Isaiah, Daniel—all who foresaw Messiah from afar without experiencing His earthly ministry.
