

Matthew 13:40

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

As therefore the tares are gathered and burned in the fire; so shall it be in the end of this world.

Analysis

As therefore the tares are gathered and burned in the fire; so shall it be in the end of this world (ἐν τῇ συντελείᾳ τοῦ αἰῶνος τούτου, en tē synteleía tou aiōnos toutou). The comparison is explicit: just as farmers inevitably separated dandelion from wheat at harvest and burned the poisonous weeds, divine judgment will separate false professors from true believers at the eschaton.

The burning is not annihilation but punishment—fire imagery consistently represents conscious judgment in Scripture (v. 42, 50; Matthew 25:41). The aorist passive are gathered (συλλέγεται, syllegetai) emphasizes the thoroughness of the harvest—no tares escape, no wheat is lost. This parable demolishes universalism and challenges easy-believism: not everyone who appears to be 'planted' in the kingdom truly belongs to Christ.

Historical Context

Jewish apocalyptic literature of the Second Temple period (200 BC - AD 70) frequently used harvest and fire imagery for final judgment (cf. 4 Ezra, 1 Enoch). Jesus draws on these familiar themes but personalizes them—He is the Lord of the harvest (Matthew 9:38) who will execute judgment.

Study Questions

1. How does the inevitability of tare-burning challenge contemporary reluctance to speak of divine judgment?
2. What distinguishes you as 'wheat' rather than 'tares'—external religious behavior or internal spiritual reality?
3. How should the certainty of final separation affect your urgency in gospel proclamation?
