

Matthew 15:25

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Then came she and worshipped him, saying, Lord, help me.

Analysis

Then came she and worshipped him, saying, Lord, help me (ἡ δὲ ἐλθοῦσα προσεκύνει αὐτῷ λέγουσα, Κύριε, βοήθει μοι, hē de elthousa prosekynei autō legousa, Kyrie, boēthei moi)—despite apparent rejection, the woman drew nearer. The word prosekynei (worshipped, prostrated) indicates full submission and reverence. Her cry 'Lord, help me' (Κύριε, βοήθει μοι) is brief, desperate, and theologically profound.

This three-word prayer—'Lord, help me'—contains the essence of saving faith: recognizing Christ's lordship, admitting helplessness, and casting oneself entirely on his mercy. She didn't argue theology, demand rights, or dispute Christ's statement about his mission. Instead, she worshipped and pleaded. Her persistence through rejection demonstrated the unshakeable faith Jesus sought to reveal and reward.

Historical Context

A Canaanite woman approaching a Jewish rabbi was socially transgressive on multiple levels: gender barriers (rabbis rarely taught women publicly), ethnic barriers (Jews had 'no dealings with Samaritans,' let alone Canaanites), and religious barriers (she was a pagan Gentile). Yet her daughter's demon possession (v. 22) drove her past all social constraints. Maternal desperation created boldness that religious propriety would have forbidden.

Study Questions

1. How does the woman's response to apparent rejection (drawing nearer and worshipping rather than withdrawing in offense) model persevering faith?
2. What makes the simple prayer 'Lord, help me' so powerful, and how does its brevity contrast with lengthy, elaborate prayers?
3. In what situations has desperation driven you to break through barriers (social, emotional, or spiritual) to reach Jesus?
