

Matthew 15:7

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Ye hypocrites, well did Esaias prophesy of you, saying,

Analysis

Jesus' designation 'hypocrites' (Greek 'hypokritai'—actors, pretenders) is devastating. Their outward religious performance masked inward rebellion against God's Word. The term connects to Isaiah's prophecy, showing this isn't a new problem but Israel's recurring sin. Reformed doctrine emphasizes that external religiosity without heart transformation is worthless before God. True worship requires regeneration, not mere ritual conformity. The Pharisees exemplify dead orthodoxy—correct external forms with unregenerate hearts.

Historical Context

Jesus quotes Isaiah 29:13, spoken during Hezekiah's reign when Judah faced Assyrian threat. Then as now, people drew near with lips while hearts remained far. The LXX (Septuagint) version Jesus likely quoted emphasizes teaching human precepts as doctrines. This pattern of formalism plagued Israel throughout its history.
