

Matthew 17:3

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And, behold, there appeared unto them Moses and Elias talking with him.

Analysis

Moses and Elijah's appearance with Jesus reveals His divine nature and mission's continuity with Old Testament revelation. Moses represents the Law, Elijah the Prophets—together they comprise Israel's Scripture, both testifying to Christ. Their conversation about Jesus' 'decease' (Luke 9:31, Greek 'exodos'—exodus) in Jerusalem shows the cross as the ultimate exodus, liberating from sin. Reformed theology sees the Transfiguration validating Christ's deity and showing Old Testament Scripture pointing to Him. The glorified Christ prefigures His resurrection body.

Historical Context

Moses and Elijah both had unusual departures from earth—Moses died with God burying him (Deuteronomy 34:5-6), Elijah was taken up in a whirlwind (2 Kings 2:11). Both encountered God on mountains (Moses at Sinai, Elijah at Horeb). Their appearance demonstrates that death hasn't destroyed them and points to resurrection hope. The Transfiguration occurs six days after Peter's confession, connecting Christ's identity with His coming glorification.
