

Matthew 2:3

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

When Herod the king had heard these things, he was troubled, and all Jerusalem with him.

Analysis

Herod's troubled reaction reveals the fundamental conflict between earthly kingdoms and God's kingdom. As a usurper with no legitimate claim to David's throne, Herod feared any rival. His trouble parallels the world's ongoing hostility to Christ's rule. That 'all Jerusalem' was troubled shows how even God's people can prefer corrupt stability over God's righteous King when self-interest is threatened.

Historical Context

Herod the Great was an Idumean (Edomite) appointed king of Judea by Rome in 40 BC. Known for architectural achievements but also paranoid cruelty, he murdered family members and infants to secure his throne. He died in 4 BC.
