

Matthew 23:28

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Even so ye also outwardly appear righteous unto men, but within ye are full of hypocrisy and iniquity.

Analysis

Outwardly appear righteous unto men (ἐξωθεν μὲν φαίνεσθε δίκαιοις τοῖς ἀνθρώποις)—phainesthē means "to appear" or "seem," implying the appearance doesn't match reality. Dikaiois (righteous) would normally be praiseworthy, but here it's mere façade. The Pharisees cultivated reputation for righteousness through conspicuous piety—long prayers (23:14), elaborate phylacteries (23:5), prominent almsgiving (Matthew 6:2).

Within ye are full of hypocrisy and iniquity (ἔσωθεν γέμετε ὑποκρίσεως καὶ ἀνομίας)—gemete means "filled, packed full." Hypokrisis originally meant "play-acting"—performing a role rather than being authentic. Anomias (lawlessness) is shocking: those zealous for law-keeping were actually law-breakers at heart level. Romans 2:17-29 echoes this—external Judaism without circumcised heart is lawlessness.

Historical Context

First-century Judaism highly valued public reputation for righteousness. Pharisees gained social prestige, political influence, and religious authority through perceived piety. They occupied chief seats in synagogues (23:6), received reverential titles (23:7-10), and controlled Temple operations. But Jesus exposes their public righteousness as performance—they played the role of righteous men while their hearts remained unregenerate, filled with pride, greed, and cruelty.
