

Matthew 24:13

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

But he that shall endure unto the end, the same shall be saved.

Analysis

Jesus' promise 'he that shall endure unto the end, the same shall be saved' connects perseverance with salvation. This doesn't mean salvation by works but that genuine faith perseveres through trials. 'Endure unto the end' means maintaining faith despite persecution, deception, and falling away (vv. 9-12). True believers don't lose salvation but prove it through endurance. Perseverance is evidence of regeneration, not its cause. Temporary faith isn't saving faith.

Historical Context

The context describes persecution (v. 9), false prophets (v. 11), and love growing cold (v. 12)—severe testing. Some will fall away, proving their faith was false. But genuine believers endure, demonstrating the Holy Spirit's preserving work. This isn't self-effort but God's grace enabling perseverance (Philippians 1:6).
