

Matthew 24:37

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

But as the days of Noe were, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be.

Analysis

---

But as the days of Noe were, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be—Jesus draws a typological parallel between Noah's generation and the end-times. The Greek construction emphasizes exact correspondence: 'just as...so also.' The comparison isn't about wickedness levels but about unpreparedness and suddenness. Noah (Νόε, Νῶε) preached for 120 years while building the ark (2 Peter 2:5), yet his generation ignored the warning.

The parousia (παρουσία = coming/presence) of the Son of Man will catch an unbelieving world in the same spiritual stupor. They knew judgment was coming—Noah's preaching and the ark's construction were unmistakable—but they 'knew not' (v.39), meaning they refused to believe and prepare. Willful ignorance, not lack of information, condemned them.

Historical Context

Genesis 6-9 records the flood account, which Jesus treats as historical fact, not myth. Jewish tradition (Book of Enoch, Jubilees) elaborated Noah's story, and Jesus assumes His audience knows the narrative. The flood became the archetype for divine judgment—total, unexpected to the wicked, salvation for the righteous remnant. Peter later uses the same parallel (2 Peter 3:5-7) to warn scoffers.

Study Questions

1. What parallels between Noah's generation and contemporary culture do you observe—prosperity, violence, spiritual apathy?
2. How can you be a 'Noah' in your generation—building the ark (spiritual preparation) while warning others?
3. Why do humans consistently ignore clear warnings about coming judgment, and how can you avoid this pattern?
