

Matthew 25:46

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And these shall go away into everlasting punishment: but the righteous into life eternal.

Analysis

The final verdict 'And these shall go away into everlasting punishment: but the righteous into life eternal' establishes two eternal destinies. 'Everlasting punishment' and 'life eternal' use the same Greek word (aiōnios—eternal), proving hell and heaven are equally eternal. This refutes annihilationism—punishment is ongoing, not mere cessation of existence. The parallelism underscores finality—no second chances, purgatory, or universalism. Every person faces one of two eternal outcomes.

Historical Context

This concludes Jesus' teaching on final judgment. The symmetry of 'everlasting' applied to both punishment and life emphasizes permanence. 'Punishment' is ongoing penalty, not corrective discipline leading to restoration. 'Life eternal' isn't mere existence but knowing God (John 17:3). These represent qualitatively different eternal states—torment versus joy.
