

Matthew 26:7

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

There came unto him a woman having an alabaster box of very precious ointment, and poured it on his head, as he sat at meat.

Analysis

There came unto him a woman having an alabaster box of very precious ointment—John 12:3 identifies her as Mary of Bethany. The alabastron (ἀλάβαστρον) was a flask carved from translucent alabaster stone, sealed to preserve aromatic oil. The ointment was nardos pistikos (νάρδος πιστικός), pure nard imported from the Himalayas—Mark 14:5 values it at 300 denarii (a year's wages for a laborer).

And poured it on his head, as he sat at meat—This prophetic act anointed Jesus as Messiah ('Christ' means 'Anointed One'). Kings were anointed on the head (1 Samuel 10:1, 16:13). Mary grasps what the disciples miss: Jesus is about to die. Her extravagant worship prefigures His burial anointing.

Historical Context

Nard (spikenard) came from the Nardostachys jatamansi plant in India/Nepal, making it extraordinarily expensive. To break the sealed alabaster flask meant pouring out everything—the ointment couldn't be preserved for another use. This was total, unreserved devotion.

Study Questions

1. How does Mary's 'waste' of precious ointment challenge our utilitarian calculations in worship and our concept of what God is worth?
2. What spiritual insight enabled Mary to understand Jesus's approaching death when the disciples remained blind to it?
