

Matthew 27:26

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Then released he Barabbas unto them: and when he had scourged Jesus, he delivered him to be crucified.

Analysis

Then released he Barabbas unto them: and when he had scourged Jesus, he delivered him to be crucified (φραγελλώσας... παρέδωκεν ἵνα σταυρωθῇ)—Roman scourging (phragellōsas, flogging) used a flagrum—leather whips embedded with bone/metal that shredded flesh. Many died from scourging alone. This fulfilled Isaiah 53:5: 'with his stripes we are healed.'

The innocent suffered for the guilty—Barabbas walked free while Jesus went to the cross. This is substitutionary atonement enacted: the righteous for the unrighteous (1 Peter 3:18). Every believer is Barabbas—guilty, condemned, freed because Another took our place.

Historical Context

Roman verberatio (severe flogging) preceded crucifixion to hasten death. Victims were stripped, bound to a post, and beaten across the back, buttocks, and legs. The flagellum (scourge) caused deep lacerations, heavy bleeding, and shock.
