

Matthew 27:43

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

He trusted in God; let him deliver him now, if he will have him: for he said, I am the Son of God.

Analysis

---

He trusted in God; let him deliver him now, if he will have him—quoting Psalm 22:8 almost verbatim, yet blind to its prophetic nature. For he said, I am the Son of God—they accurately report Jesus's claim (Matthew 26:63-64) while mocking it.

The darkest irony: God WILL deliver him—through death into resurrection. The Father's silence (soon to be broken by earthquake and torn veil) is not absence but sovereign plan. Jesus trusts the Father even when the Father hides his face (v. 46). Trust persists through forsakenness—the deepest mystery of the cross.

Historical Context

Jewish theology held that God delivers the righteous (Psalm 34:19, Daniel 3:17). That Jesus hangs undelivered 'proved' to mockers that his claims were false. They could not conceive that God's deliverance would come through death and resurrection, not escape from death.

Study Questions

1. How does Jesus's trust in the Father—even through forsakenness—model ultimate faith (Hebrews 5:7-8)?
2. What does God's 'delay' in deliverance teach about trusting God's plan when circumstances seem to contradict his promises?
