

Matthew 27:54

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Now when the centurion, and they that were with him, watching Jesus, saw the earthquake, and those things that were done, they feared greatly, saying, Truly this was the Son of God.

Analysis

Now when the centurion, and they that were with him, watching Jesus, saw the earthquake, and those things that were done, they feared greatly, saying, Truly this was the Son of God. The Roman centurion supervising the crucifixion witnessed supernatural events and declared faith. 'Saw the earthquake, and those things that were done' (ιδόντες τὸν σεισμόν καὶ τὰ γινόμενα/idontes ton seimon kai ta genomena)—darkness, earthquake, opened tombs, the manner of Jesus's death (His voluntary yielding of spirit, His loud cry despite physical weakness).

'They feared greatly' (ἐφοβήθησαν σφόδρα/ephobēthēsan sphodra)—intense fear, awe before divine power. This wasn't mere superstition but recognition of God's presence. 'Truly this was the Son of God' (Ἀληθῶς θεοῦ υἱὸς ἦν οὗτος/Alēthōs theou hyios ēn houtos)—remarkable confession from a pagan soldier.

Whether this was saving faith or mere acknowledgment is debated. Early tradition (some church fathers) held the centurion (named Longinus in tradition) became a Christian. At minimum, it shows God's power to open even hardened hearts—a Roman soldier trained to kill, who had crucified many, saw in Jesus's death something transcendent and confessed His divine sonship.

Historical Context

Centurions were professional soldiers, commanding 80-100 men, tough and experienced. This man had likely supervised numerous crucifixions. Yet Jesus's death was unique—the darkness, earthquake, His bearing, His words ('Father, forgive them,' 'It is finished'). These signs convinced even a pagan soldier of Christ's deity.

This fulfills Jesus's words: 'I, if I be lifted up... will draw all men unto me' (John 12:32). The cross that appeared as weakness became the magnet drawing even Gentile soldiers to faith.

Study Questions

1. How does a pagan Roman centurion confessing Jesus as 'Son of God' demonstrate the gospel's power to save even the most unlikely people?
2. What specific evidences convinced the centurion—how can we point others to similar evidence of Christ's deity and saving work?
3. What does it mean that supernatural signs (earthquake, darkness) accompanied the cross—how do these validate Christ's atoning death?
