

Matthew 27:65

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Pilate said unto them, Ye have a watch: go your way, make it as sure as ye can.

Analysis

Ye have a watch (ἔχετε κουστωδίαν)—Pilate granted their request, assigning Roman temple guards (koustodia, a Latin loanword). His dismissive go your way, make it as sure as ye can (ὑπάγετε ἀσφαλίσασθε ὡς οἴδατε) drips with irony: 'secure it as best you know how.' Pilate saw through their fear—a dead man needs no guard.

The phrase 'as ye can' acknowledges human limitation. They would deploy maximum security: stone, seal, soldiers. Yet all human safeguards proved powerless against divine power. The secured tomb became God's set stage: when Jesus rose despite every precaution, only supernatural resurrection could explain it. The guard's testimony (28:11-15) confirmed they couldn't stop him—they could only be bribed to lie about it. Human effort cannot prevent God's purposes.

Historical Context

Temple guards were crack Roman troops. Their assignment to tomb duty was unusual—showing the leaders' influence with Pilate and their genuine fear. The seal and guard remained until Sunday morning when the earthquake and angel appeared (28:2-4). The soldiers' later testimony of being bribed (28:11-15) appears in Matthew alone, exposing the cover-up.
