

Matthew 5:17

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Think not that I am come to destroy the law, or the prophets: I am not come to destroy, but to fulfil.

Analysis

This verse stands as a pivotal declaration in the Sermon on the Mount, addressing concerns that Jesus' ministry contradicts the Old Testament. The Greek word 'kataluo' (καταλύω) means to destroy, dismantle, or abolish. Jesus emphatically denies this intention. Instead, He came to 'fulfill' (πληρώω/plerosai) the Law and Prophets—to complete, accomplish, and bring to full expression. This fulfillment operates on multiple levels:

1. Jesus perfectly obeyed the Law's demands
2. He accomplished the prophetic promises pointing to Messiah,
3. He revealed the Law's deepest meaning and intent.

Far from abolishing Scripture, Jesus establishes it on firmer ground by embodying its righteousness and explaining its true spiritual significance.

Historical Context

First-century Judaism held Scripture (Torah and Prophets) in highest reverence. Pharisees and scribes meticulously preserved and interpreted the Law. When Jesus challenged their traditions (Mark 7:1-13) and reinterpreted Sabbath law (Matthew 12:1-8), religious leaders accused Him of undermining Scripture. This context makes Jesus' clarification crucial—He honors Scripture's authority while exposing how traditions had obscured its true meaning. Early Christians, many from Jewish backgrounds, needed this teaching to understand continuity between Old and New Covenants.
