

Matthew 6:20

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

But lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt, and where thieves do not break through nor steal:

Analysis

Jesus contrasts earthly with heavenly treasure: 'But lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt, and where thieves do not break through nor steal' (Greek: θησαυρίζετε δὲ ὑμῖν θησαυροὺς ἐν οὐρανῷ, 'treasure up treasures in heaven'). Heavenly treasures are invulnerable to decay or theft - eternal and secure. What constitutes heavenly treasure? Acts of mercy, generosity to the poor, sacrificial love, faithfulness to God - investments in eternal realities rather than temporal comforts. The same verb θησαυρίζω is used, but the location shifts everything. This is wise stewardship - investing in what endures.

Historical Context

Jewish thought recognized rewards for righteousness (Daniel 12:3, Malachi 3:16-17), but Jesus emphasizes present action determining eternal outcome. His teaching resembles Rabbi Yochanan ben Zakkai's later saying: 'If you have done much in the study of Torah, they give you much reward... and faithful is your employer who shall pay you the reward of your labor; and know that the grant of reward unto the righteous is in the age to come.' Early Christians practiced radical generosity (Acts 2:45, 4:32-37), living out this heavenly treasure ethic.
