

Matthew 8:28

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And when he was come to the other side into the country of the Gergesenes, there met him two possessed with devils, coming out of the tombs, exceeding fierce, so that no man might pass by that way.

Analysis

The mention of 'two possessed with devils' in the country of the Gergesenes introduces the dramatic exorcism that follows. Matthew mentions two demoniacs while Mark and Luke focus on one (perhaps the more prominent). Their dwelling among tombs and exceeding fierceness demonstrates the dehumanizing effects of demonic possession—isolation from community, dwelling with death, and violence. This illustrates Satan's work of theft, killing, and destruction (John 10:10).

Historical Context

The Gergesenes (also called Gadarenes or Gerasenes in parallel accounts) lived in the Decapolis, a predominantly Gentile region east of Galilee. The presence of pigs (verse 30) confirms the Gentile setting, as Jews considered swine unclean. This mission to Gentile territory prefigures the gospel's expansion beyond Israel.

Study Questions

1. What does the demoniacs' condition teach about Satan's goal of dehumanizing and destroying those under his power?
2. How does this Gentile exorcism demonstrate that Christ's power extends beyond ethnic Israel to all nations?
