

Numbers 1:14

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Of Gad; Eliasaph the son of Deuel.

Analysis

Gad's position among the tribes reflects Jacob's prophecy that 'a troop shall overcome him: but he shall overcome at the last' (Genesis 49:19). The tribe's military prowess and eventual territorial success demonstrate God's faithfulness to prophetic words spoken generations earlier. This pattern of struggle followed by victory prefigures the Christian life, where believers endure tribulation but ultimately triumph through Christ.

Historical Context

Gad, seventh son of Jacob through Zilpah, settled east of the Jordan River in territory taken from the Amorites. The tribe later produced mighty warriors who aided David (1 Chronicles 12:8-15), fulfilling Jacob's prophecy about military strength.
