

Numbers 15:21

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Of the first of your dough ye shall give unto the LORD an heave offering in your generations.

Analysis

Of the first of your dough ye shall give unto the LORD an heave offering in your generations—the emphatic repetition underscores this as perpetual legislation, not temporary wilderness regulation. "In your generations" (ledorotekem, לְדֹרֹתֵיכֶם) means "throughout your generations," establishing this as permanent covenant obligation. Each generation must teach the next to honor God from the first of their produce.

The generational emphasis connects to covenant continuity. God's relationship with Israel wasn't just with one generation but perpetually with their descendants. Each generation must actively choose covenant faithfulness, teaching children to give God priority in material blessings. This anticipates the Shema's command: "Thou shalt teach them diligently unto thy children" (Deuteronomy 6:7). Failure to pass covenant faithfulness to the next generation led to cycles of apostasy in Judges.

Historical Context

Israel's history shows repeated patterns of apostasy when one generation failed to teach the next. Judges 2:10 records: "there arose another generation after them, which knew not the LORD." The exile ultimately resulted from accumulated generational unfaithfulness. Post-exilic Judaism emphasized careful transmission of traditions to prevent recurrence. The New Testament continues this emphasis:

"Train up a child in the way he should go" (Proverbs 22:6); fathers should bring up children "in the nurture and admonition of the Lord" (Ephesians 6:4).
