

Numbers 16:21

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Separate yourselves from among this congregation, that I may consume them in a moment.

Analysis

Separate yourselves from among this congregation, that I may consume them in a moment—God commands Moses and Aaron to hibadlu (הִבְדִּילוּ, separate/distinguish yourselves), the same root used for sacred separation (Leviticus 20:26). The phrase va'akhaleh otam ke'rega (וְאָכַלְהֶם כֶּרֶגַע, 'I may consume them in a moment') reveals that the entire congregation—not just Korah's 250—faces destruction for their complicity.

This is corporate judgment: the people chose sides, and choosing against God's anointed is choosing against God. Yet God warns the righteous first—grace precedes wrath. Moses and Aaron's intercession (v. 22) shows they understood their mediatorial role, prefiguring Christ who 'ever liveth to make intercession' (Hebrews 7:25). The 'moment' (rega) emphasizes how swift divine judgment can be—one instant from rebellion to ruin.

Historical Context

This is Israel's fourth major rebellion (grumbling at Marah, golden calf, Taberah, Kadesh-barnea), but the first where God threatens to destroy the entire nation except Moses and Aaron. Earlier, Moses was exempted alone (Exodus 32:10); now Aaron shares the promise, validating his priesthood.

Study Questions

1. When have you been called to 'separate' from a group movement you discerned was opposing God, even at social cost?
2. How does God's warning to Moses and Aaron before judgment demonstrate His character—both just (punishing sin) and merciful (protecting the righteous)?
