

Numbers 21:35

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

So they smote him, and his sons, and all his people, until there was none left him alive: and they possessed his land.

Analysis

Israel 'smote him, and his sons, and all his people, until there was none left him alive remaining: and they possessed his land.' This complete conquest fulfilled God's promise and provided territory for Reuben, Gad, and half-Manasseh. The totality of victory demonstrated God's power when Israel obeyed in faith, contrasting with earlier failure at Kadesh-barnea when they feared similar giants.

Historical Context

Og's kingdom of Bashan (modern Golan Heights) became Israelite territory, fulfilling God's promise to give them land from Egypt to Euphrates. This victory proved that the giants their parents feared (13:33) couldn't withstand God's power.
